Environmental Educator

The nation is turning its eyes toward Milwaukee's Urban Ecology Center as the model of effective and impactful urban environmental education. Located on vibrant public green spaces, our fast-growing organization serves over 75,000 people of all ages annually. Our innovative team of cutting-edge non-profit professionals works in a creative, high-energy open office in a state-of-the-art green facility. Awarded the national Alfred P Sloan "When Work Works" recognition and a 2009 Top Workplace by the Business Journal, the Urban Ecology Center is a leader in workplace flexibility. The Urban Ecology Center's facility and programs have been recognized nationally and internationally for their innovative approach to sustainability, neighborhood-based urban environmental education and citizen science.

The Environmental Educator's primary responsibility is to teach environmental science programs for urban school age children. The educator regularly communicates with schools participating in the Neighborhood Environmental Education Project, a unique partnership that provides field trips and resources focused on ecologically minded mentoring and student access to the outdoors. This program requires creative design and implementation of innovative programs on natural history, science, ecology and environmental issues to school children K-12. During the summer, the educator will develop and teach camper-centered, inquiry-based summer day camps. Teaching experience, excellent written and oral communication skills, experience with urban youth and a clean driving record are required. The ability to speak Spanish is strongly preferred. Physical ability with reasonable accommodation is required for various activities, such as carrying canoes, or paddling or hiking for a full day.

Compensation for this full time, year-round position is $27,500 with full benefits.

Minorities are encouraged to apply.
